DISTINGUISHED MEN OF MAINLAND UNIVERSITIES GIVE ADDRESSES

preparation, and its high standards in the most advanced work—and, on the other hand, towards Michigan and California, of which the former represents the first people's university, and the latter the western frontier in state educational institutions, both emphasizing the principal that the university of the state is a part of the government, the same as a public school system, and that their administration and curricula must immediately conform to the demands of public need, giving rise thereby not infrequently to too great an insistence on special vocational training as compared with solid preparation for all walks of life. If I repeat you turn your eyes toward these older private and newer state institutions, then you see in perspective practically all there is to be seen in modern education. If you look upon the American institutions of learning in another way you will find that while we have many hundreds of institutions, chartered under the names of colleges and universities, their standards differ as widely as those of high schools and of the greatest universities of Europe.

High Schools Standardized.
"It is a pitiful thing to observe, for a man like myself, holding the office of dean of the graduate school, that students have spent four years in high school and four years in some college, without bringing the preparation which would admit them to the same standing as students holding the bachelor's degree from a responsible institution. It means a loss of one or two years in a young man's or young woman's life, and more than that, disappointment and discouragement. High schools have become pretentious, but in that direction, but the most to be hoped for is an early realization of the typical American university beginning with the bachelor's degree.
"It is the first duty of every institution to analyze itself to carefully determine just how much it can accomplish, how far it can go, in education of the young, reckoned by years, and then try to accomplish its chosen work better than any other institution of the same class, ever watching, of course, for opportunities to grow and expand, and to rise to higher responsibilities. The United States commissioner of education has invited in conference the leading educational organizations of the continent in an effort to bring about a standardization of colleges, the main purpose, as I take it, being to define the scope of preparation which a student should bring in seeking admission to the graduate schools of the larger institutions. The graduate school of an institution forms the real university. In it exists that academic freedom of choice of subject for investigation and research.

Student May Get Character.
"The best that a student can bring from his college course is not the knowledge of a mass of fact and data, but a well developed character, thoroughness in all he attacks, competence in the fundamental subjects of education, not facts, and a solid foundation for advanced work in a particular line, whether it be professional or academic."

Dr. Leuschner appreciates vocational training, but made it plain that he believes the idea may be carried too far. He commented:

"Vocational training in your grade and high schools tends to eliminate the classics, history and the cultural subjects in favor of the so-called practical ones. Its tendency will be to make the boys and girls efficient in one line, and that one only," he declared.

"Isn't there just the chance that by taking from our children the opportunity to learn something of the other good things in education we are denying them wider opportunity? Is it not rational to give them a large foundation upon which they shall build their own destinies?"

Words by Mary Dillingham Frear.

Sung by Male Chorus last night at Punahou Anniversary Exercises, Kawaiahae church.

What ho! ye stalwart mariners, now whither do ye sail?
Your eyes are bright with heaven's light, your courage doth not fail.
"The heathen cry" they, smiling, said. "They call on thee and me.
We sail to their distress, around a world of sea.
What though there's no returning from off that island strand?
What though there's no returning from out that tropic land?
Where summer never, never dies, strength fails and so may we;
But, conscience clear, and naught to fear, we'll sleep beside the sea."
Lo, many years have vanished. The mariners are gone,
Sailed on to dream in brighter day beyond the beautiful dawn.
What ho, ye sometime mariners! Ye followed well the gleam.
The land ye sought in sacrifice, transformed by love hath been.
Good-will ye brought and well ye wrought; sail on, and happy, dream!

'PUNAHOU DAY' TOMORROW; AN INFORMAL EVENT

Reunion of Grads, Students and Friends; Basket Lunch at Noon; Special Addresses

PUNAHOU DAY.

WELCOME: All Punahou—present and past Punahou parents, students, trustees, teachers and friends. Everybody who is interested. All come and make a day of it. No tickets of admission.

TIME: Thursday, June 21, 9:30 to 4 o'clock.

PROGRAM: Details of program are given herewith. Main points are: 9:30, reception; 12, basket lunch; 1, general meeting; 2:30, dances and military drill.

LUNCHEON: Picnic lunch on campus. Luncheon may be deposited at Pauahi hall. There will be an opportunity to buy luncheon on the grounds.

GENERAL MEETING: A rousing meeting which everyone will wish to attend.

AUTOMOBILES: All automobiles will enter by the main gate. All other gates will be closed. "Automobiles will park along Palm avenue. They will not be allowed in the campus above. The campus will be given over to games in the open places and to sociability in the shade of the trees.

Tomorrow is "Punahou Day"—closing day of the 75th anniversary exercises, and also one filled with interest from morning to night.

It will be a general reunion for Punahou folk, all the more general because inclusive of neighbors. The basket lunch at noon on the grass under the veteran Punahou trees typifies the spirit of the occasion.

"This is to be a day for everybody," says the committee chairman, "for all interested in Punahou. They are to be both guests and hosts, and the big picnic lunch at noon on the grounds will be an especial feature. Everyone is asked to bring a basket lunch and join in the good fellowship."

The program is as follows:
9:30 a. m.—Reception by trustees and their wives with neighbors. The lawn in front of Cooke library.

All Day—Registration of all persons at Cooke library.

All Day—Exhibition of old photographs and other Punahou memorabilia at Cooke library.

WOMEN PROTEST AGAINST RESTRAINT ON MARRIAGE

VIENNA, June.—To protest against the legal prohibitions and hindrances to marriage in Austria, the Austrian Women's Union is organizing a series of demonstrations. In a manifesto issued to the public the Union declares that it is surprising that at a moment when there is a general desire for an increase of population the state itself prevents whole categories of persons, especially women, from marriages.

The honey and wax production of the United States is valued at $6,900,000 a year.
